Useful Information

Short History of Budapest and Hungary

Budapest, the capital of Hungary, is located in the centre of Middle Europe, on both sides of the river Danube. The fact that about 2 million people, every fifth Hungarian, live in the capital shows the dominant role of the city. The Danube determines the life of Budapest. Due to the geographic features of the Danube valley, there are more than 130 thermal springs and more than twenty public baths in the city. The most popular of them are Gellért Bath and the Széchenyi Bath.

Budapest was created by the unification of the three cities of Buda, Óbuda and Pest in the year 1873. The green side, the Buda hills, the soft inclines of Óbuda on the left bank and the plain industrial area of Pest on the right bank diversify the city. Today, eight bridges assure the connection between the two sides of the city. Three of them, Liberty Bridge, Margaret Bridge and Chain Bridge, can still be admired in their original beauty.

Gellért Hill with the Citadel and the Royal Castle with its castle district dominates the view of Buda. In this district you will find the extremely rich collection of the Hungarian National Gallery and the National Széchenyi Library. The neo-Gothic building of the Parliament stands on the Pest side. The view of Pest reflects the economical and social development of large middle class housing units built at the end of the 19th century. The economic boom after the political changes two decades ago has given a powerful boost to the city. Our capital is renewing day by day and develops to a true "metropol". The various and rich history and the dynamic cultural, culinary and economical life impress the visitors, during their discovery of Budapest, "Pearl of the Danube".
